

Things to find out about in Faith & meaning venues

Seminar groups have suggested the following items be built into a proforma for visiting faith and meaning-based venues:

What activities are available?

- What roles do people adopt?
- When is it open? Days, times and duration of services and other activities. How many people are involved?
- Information about church & non-church activities in the building
- What facilities. Building aspect / design / location
- Individual events
- What goes on
- Cultural issues
- Are refreshments provided?

What support arrangements are in place?

- Do people take care of each other in this community?
- Who is the right person to approach name, address, phone, email. Is there a committee or other arrangement for making decisions? Is there a feedback or complaints procedure?
- Public transport and access are there steps to get in? Physical access inside and outside the building. Is the space warm and the furniture comfortable?
- Toilet arrangements
- Is there heating in the building?
- Attitudes? How were you welcomed? Is there a named person there who will provide support? Is there any literature for me to take away?

What do I have to do to participate?

- Are men and women treated differently? Are most participants male, old, families, intellectuals?
- Is there a formal or informal fee? Do I need any special equipment? Am I expected to make a donation? Is there a dress code?
- Are you accepted there, pressured or welcomed even if you haven't been brought up in that religion or if you don't follow their teachings?
- Is the group trying to persuade people to support its views, recruit people or sell anything?
- Rules of membership (e.g. possible uses of hall). How do people join?
- Risks
- Anything else to note?

Administration

- Name and contact details of the person who completed this form.
- Date of the visit.
